Ancient Hunters and the Great Inland Seas: 9,000 Years of Submerged Prehistory

Shipwreck research isn’t the only underwater archeology being conducted on the Great Lakes. Dr. John O’Shea’s research explores the potential human occupation of the Alpena-Amberely Ridge in central Lake Huron. During a period of low lake levels, the ridge would have been a natural migration route for caribou, therefore a logical hunting ground for humans. Join us to learn about the research taking place to explore these exciting possibilities.

Dr. John O’Shea is professor of anthropology and curator of Great Lakes archaeology in the Museum of Anthropological Archaeology at the University of Michigan. His research is also split between conventional land-based archaeology and underwater investigations of submerged prehistoric sites and historic shipwrecks.

A Look Back at Museum on the Move

2015 was the inaugural year of our Museum on the Move program. We hoped to introduce our members to new experiences on the Great Lakes and to introduce our organization to new people in the Great Lakes region. We took you on a tour of the Cleveland Harbor aboard the Holiday in the spring of 2015 and then a tour of the Detroit River aboard the Diamond Jack in the fall. We’ve also shown our new documentary A Good Ship and Crew Well Seasoned: The Fitzgerald and Her Legacy in Rocky River, Ohio and at the Erie Maritime Museum in Erie, Pennsylvania.

Thank you to everyone who traveled with us to explore the Great Lakes. We look forward to taking you on many more adventures!

There’s More to Come with Museum on the Move!

Based on the interest in the program from its inaugural year, we are planning some new experiences across the Great Lakes for our members and friends in 2016. Along with our Jet Express Trips and our Soo Locks Bus Tour, we will be having two programs later in the year. Details are subject to change.

Historical Tour of Marblehead Peninsula: August 2016
- Marblehead Lighthouse, Lafarge Quarry, Lunch at the Catawba Island Club and a tour of Johnson’s Island.

Detroit River Tour: September 2016
- A trip aboard the Diamond Jack with lunch delivery by the JW Wescott II, the only floating post office in the world that delivers mail to ships as they are underway.

We will also continue to show the documentary A Good Ship and Crew Well Seasoned: The Fitzgerald and Her Legacy.

A documentary film produced by the National Museum of the Great Lakes and Allied Media Group, Inc. The film explores the less documented and overlooked history of the Fitzgerald and her crew before their tragic loss through unpublished manuscript material and photographs while at the same time reflecting on the impact of their loss on family, friends and colleagues in the maritime community. The film takes a refreshing break from debating the possible cause of her loss in order to direct more time to those important historical questions not yet asked.

Four decades after the Edmund Fitzgerald vanished from the radar screen of the trailing steamer, Arthur M. Anderson, the largest ship ever lost on the Great Lakes continues to inspire our capacity for wonder and grief.

Great Lakes photojournalist, Chris Winters, and Bruce Lynn, Executive Director of the Great Lakes Shipwreck Historical Society, have assembled a comprehensive look at the life and the wreck of the Edmund Fitzgerald. Brimming with rare archival material from GLSHS’s collection and over 250 photographs of the ship above and below the surface, The Legend Lives On explores the haunting legacy of this vanished “Queen of the Lakes.”
